

Sixth Form Provision 2017

Here are some notes to help students decide upon which sixth forms to apply to for A-level entry in 2017.

1. You can to apply to as many sixth form providers as you want. Before accepting a place it is advisable to have visited and checked out what you think about it.
2. By applying to more than one institution you can guard against missing out on a preferred place. For example your preferred institution may require you to achieve more GCSE grade B's than you expect to get. That doesn't mean you shouldn't apply but it does mean you should have another option at round about the grades you expect to achieve.
3. Always visit the institution via their Open Evenings aimed at potential sixth form entrants. There is a list of known Open Evening events below.
4. Part of the possible interview process may include questions about why you have chosen A-levels and how they fit into your future career plan. This is testing your motivation so put some thought into why?
5. Applications are usually required around Christmas. Many Open Evenings take place before Christmas so be organised.
6. Don't despair if you miss the institutions deadline for applications though as there is always some leeway given and they won't want to turn away a good candidate.
